

ADVIZOR® Analyst Office Brings Easy Understanding of Business Information to Everyday Business People

CHICAGO, IL – October 11, 2006.

ADVIZOR, a game changing provider of powerful and easy to use business intelligence software solutions, today announced a Microsoft Office version of its flagship product line that will bring business analytics to the masses.

“People are not getting what they need from reports, flashy charts, and complicated analytics,” says Doug Cogswell, President & CEO of ADVIZOR Solutions. “Most of these products are either not designed for analysis, or are way too difficult for most people to use. ADVIZOR presents a very simple and effective interface that everyday business people can use to analyze data and make decisions.”

ADVIZOR Analyst Office allows individual business analysts to make important decisions from data in Microsoft Excel or Access. Results can be shared with other ADVIZOR Office users, or to its enterprise products which extend the capability from the desktop, to the enterprise, and out across the extranet. With the full ADVIZOR line business managers can quickly and easily drill from a key metric to the causal factors that really matter, and companies can deliver key information both internally and across their supply chains to create strategic advantage.

ADVIZOR Analyst Office is built on data visualization technology from Bell Labs, and predictive analytics from KXEN.

ADVIZOR Analyst Office is available today at prices starting at $499 – see www.advizorsolutions.com for more details.
